

Feedback from Helpers

Host List Reliability Project was really an exciting and unique experience in itself. I learned a lot of things from it. I spoke with different people in different countries and made many friends. Everyone was quite supportive but some times I had bad luck. Some times I was even taken as a sales person calling to sell something which was quite irritating at the beginning but I managed to pull it off. Servas has some great people in it, and I did not know about that before calling those people.

Servas Youth should take part in such activities to gain experience and to get to know people from different cultures. And I invite all youth members to join in this project to make Servas even better.

In the end I would really like to thank Pablo Colangelo, for providing me this opportunity and for his continuous support and help in this project. Without him I wouldn't be able to finish my task on time.

Hearing the voice of Servas members from another country was very nice. I want to point out that all of them were very gentle in answering my questions. At the beginning of each call, many of them thought I was a traveller requesting a host and they were also very kind. Cooperating with this activity made me feel the spirit of Servas.

Making a small contribution to this enormous project confirmed once more the value of working together. Feeling the link that we, Servas members have, in tropical countries as well as in Iceland, South Africa and Italy, makes me think that we should focus on what mankind has in common and minimize differences. It was fantastic to receive warm expressions of surprise, invitations and tele -hugs from all the people I talked to.

After a year of work for the project I'm proud to reach the end of this huge first stage, thanks to the helpers and to the people who collaborated answering the phone and giving us feedback. It was great to speak to many Servas members all around the world. Thank you very much for your cooperation and I hope this process will help in some way to improve our host lists all around to be better!
